

Dear Burt,

On behalf of the City of Templeton, Iowa, I am pleased to welcome you as an honorary citizen of our great community. You now enjoy a special kinship with today's residents of Templeton – and with the enterprising citizens who made the rye whiskey during Prohibition that became known as "The Good Stuff."

Our Templeton fathers and grandfathers (and mothers and grandmothers) were an entrepreneurial lot who felt Prohibition was more of a suggestion than law of the land. Their industrious spirit made for a good community – and good spirits – and it still serves Templeton and its 362 residents well today.

I invite you to take a trip to Templeton. You'll enjoy rubbing shoulders with hard-working folks from this country's heartland, some of the best home-made pie you can imagine and, of course, the best rye whiskey in the land.

As mayor, I guarantee you'll appreciate our hospitality and enthusiasm. (I also guarantee we'll never raise taxes on our honorary citizens.)

Welcome to the Templeton Bootleggers Society and our community of Templeton enthusiasts.

Sincerely,

Ken Behrens
